Daytona racing on the beach history

A large crowd was on the side to watch the first classic car race held on daytona Beach Road Course in 1936. Despite the overwhelming fan base, Daytona Beach city officials estimated they had lost about $20,000 staging the event. (ISC Archives via Getty Images) DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. - The history of the car competition in the Daytona Beach area goes back to 1903. It is recorded that it begins with a friendly bet between two men de debate who has the fastest horseless transport. Daytona Beach's wide, hard sands have been testing pace for more than 30 years. Later in 1935, speed tests were finally held, and moved to salt flats in Utah. To further the legacy of speed, classic racing began on the beach in 1936. The concept was modified on a circuit using both the Atlantic coast and the sidewalks of State Road A1A, the legendary coastal road. The original 3.2-mile course took a northerly turn located near the center of the town. It ran about 1.5 miles north on the beach and then 1.5 miles south on a paved, public road with two sections connected by bank, spinning sand. Entering the event was a larger-than-life man named Big Bill France. He has witnessed the last year of speed running on the beach and has been fired up about what Daytona means to auto racing on a global scale. His enthusiasm was largely born of being a competitor, although the idea of promoting races is lurking in his mind. He finished a solid fifth in the 250-mile event, knowing that he could win the classic car race on a regular basis, but also if pressed into service, he could be a successful promoter. The first few years of the road course had lost money, and the local chamber of commerce approached France, asking if he could help find a promoter for the road course. The idea of promoting a race excites him, and he tells city officials that he is the perfect man for the job. While driving a race car at various racetracks across the southeast, owned by Daytona Beach restaurant owner Charlie Reese, France asked Reese if he would provide financial assistance to help him promote the beach course. A partnership was formed, and France began wearing two hats. In 1939, France accelerated driving and boosted its ambitions, and the Daytona sea course became a success. Behind the wheel in beach road races, he finished fourth and second, and a year later he had a breakthrough victory, along with other track victories to win the official championship crown. He would promote races on the beach and at various racetracks in North Carolina before the Attack on Pearl Harbor in December 1941, which brought the race to a halt. After the war in late 1945, the Daytona beach road needed to be adjusted renovated after years of inactiv activity, and in the spring of 1946, classic racing was reborn. The reality of a growing Daytona Beach population on the beach forced France to give up its original 3.2 miles in late 1947. He ran out of room to both races and provided space for the audience. A new 4.1-mile course near Ponce Inlet was created in 1948, where classic cars would compete. On February 21, 1948, NASCAR will be officially established. France will be in charge of the new sanctions agency, promoting not only races at the beach road but also a full championship schedule. NASCAR was founded on the simple idea that many lovers of revved-up engines and fast cars like France did. The modified antique cars that have been competing are not the only direction France wants to go in moving forward. In 1949, he showed his determination for a vision he had many years earlier, but was delayed by war. From 1942-1946, a small number of consumer cars were built, reducing the availability of machines from the showroom floors of car manufacturers. Now it's time for its Strictly Stock concept (what will be called the Grand National Series, and years later, the NASCAR Cup Series), a series for new sedans, that will create a national championship series. The first Strictly Stock race was held in Charlotte on June 19 on a three-quarter-mile dirt track. Then, less than a month later, on July 10, 1949, the first Daytona seaway course for the Strictly Securities division was held. It was the start of the big beach road race at Daytona Beach and the phrase won on Sunday, selling on Monday to car manufacturers. For nearly the next decade, beach road courses will play a pivotal role in NASCAR's early stages. Fast forward to 1903... William Vanderbilt introduces the first race on the beach. Dubbed the Vanderbilt Cup, crowds gathered to watch Olds and Winston fight on the hard sand beaches of Daytona. Speed records turned into racing stocks on the original track - and Daytona Beach earned its reputation for being more than just a beach. The origins of Daytona Beach dating back to the early 1870s when Mathias Day bought the old Hispanic Land Fund from the Cam Williams Plantation, painted the area, and then sold it as an early planned community in Florida. Growth slowed until industrial house Henry Flagler brought his railway to town in the 1890s. The sport became more organized when Bill France and others founded NASCAR in 1947 on the roof of the Streamline Hotel. Ten years later, the Daytona International Highway was built on that vision. Today, history is repeating itself as the speedway is reimagining an American symbol – introducing the Rising Daytona. Influential visitors have flocked to the Greater Daytona Beach area for centuries, and their contributions live on for everyone to enjoy! Renowned explorer Ponce de Leon, during the search for the Youth Fountain in 1513, discovered DeLeon Springs located just west of Daytona Beach. Dr Andrew Turnbull homesteaded 101,000 acres as the new Smyrna colony (now known as New Smyrna Beach), just south of Daytona Daytona Matthias Day, a wealthy tycoon in the north, was completely infatuated with the entire area in which he became the father of Daytona (now Daytona Beach) and built his first hotel in 1874. And Henry DeLand, with whom the nearby city of DeLand was named, founded the world-famous Stetson University in 1883. Many other entrepreneurs have made efforts to bring commerce and vision to the community. Renowned philanthropist John D. Rockefeller discovered ormond Beach's unimimed golf courses and made his winter home at The Casements. Civil rights leader and educator Dr Mary McLeod Bethune overcame major obstacles to found the University of Bethune-Cookman in 1904. And of course Bill France founded NASCAR in 1948 and built the World Racing Center, Daytona International Speedway, in 1959. Today, the Daytona Beach area entertains over 10 million influential visitors each year! These travelers, who influence friends and family with their holiday stories, come from all over the world to relax and enjoy the region's many treasures, both old and new. This trend continues with other entrepreneurs attempting to build a commercial city and vision. Major General Charles Burgoyne began by building a community centre in Daytona Beach in the early 1900s. Burgoyne has organized concerts along the waterfront actively promoting the town's events to visitors. Daytona Beach not only inspires those who want to test the limits of speed, but also those who are already eager to test the limits of society. Daytona Beach's role in the history of civil rights is crucial. On March 17, 1946, Jackie Robinson played in her first integrated spring training baseball game with the Montreal Royals, a Brooklyn Dodgers farm team. He later became the first African-American to play in Major Leagues. Today, Robinson's name identifies the stadium, Jackie Robinson Ballpark, at Daytona Beach and a life-size statue of him was cast at the entrance. Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune founded a school in 1904 to educate the daughter of African-American workers on the railroad known as Bethune-Cookman College (now Bethune-Cookman University) and was later appointed to government positions by Calvin Coolidge, Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman. Today, students and visitors can learn about the achievements of her life at her former home which is now a museum on the university's campus. Dr Mary McLeod's Bethune Home & Gravestone Automobile racing became a regular pastime along hard-packed beaches in the early 20th century. Ormond Beach is known as the birth place of speed due to the different land speed records set there. In 1947, the National Automobile Racing Association was founded in Daytona Beach. Motorsports gained new ground in 1959 with the opening of Daytona International Speedway, continues to please hundreds of thousands of speed hungry fans each year. Today, the Daytona Beach area entertains visitors from all over the world to relax and recreate one of the most beautiful, family-friendly beaches in Florida.
